SO-702: Research Methodology

Objective

This course has been devised to equip the students with the necessary expertise for carrying out their Theses, by selecting and employing methodologically correct theoretical perspectives, tools and techniques. Another objective of this course is to keep the students updated with the emerging methodological issues and techniques. The course will acclimatize the students with the practical process of designing field research, apart from the appropriate use of statistical methods and computer software for data analysis and interpretation.

Course Content

Unit I

Epistemological and Methodological Issues in Social Science Research – (a) Positivistic versus Interpretive Perspective: Major Assumptions and Methodological Implications; (b) Quantitative versus Qualitative Methodology; (c) Pure and Applied Research; Action Research

Unit II

Conceptualization and Operationalization (Practical Exercises) – (a) Sampling: Choosing a sampling method; probability, non-probability and theoretical sampling (Practical Exercises); (b) Triangulation; Mixing Quantitative and Qualitative Methodology (Practical Exercises); (c) Interdisciplinary Research in Social Sciences: Rationale and Significance

Unit III

Methods of Data Collection – (a) Qualitative and Quantitative; Criteria for Choosing appropriate method/s for your study; Combining Methods (Practical Exercises); (b) Conducting Ethnographic research; Using Narratives; Doing Naturalistic Inquiry; Conducting Focused Group Discussions (Practical Exercises); (c) Data Processing and Analysis: Quantitative and Qualitative; Qualitative Coding

Unit IV

Selection and Formulation of Research Problem under Quantitative and Qualitative Research Proposal – (a) Developing Theoretical Framework for Research (Practical Exercises); (b) Hypothesis: Writing a good and testable hypothesis (Practical Exercises); (c) Research Synopsis: Format, Writing a good synopsis (Practical Exercises); (d) Writing a thesis: Ingredients; language; presentation

SO-703: Seminar Course

Objective

The objective of this paper is to train the candidate in the art of writing a seminar paper along the lines of a mini-dissertation and to face a viva voce test.

Course Content

This is a 2 Credit course carrying 50 marks. The paper will involve writing of a Seminar paper (30 marks) and its viva voce presentation (20 marks)

The topic of the paper can be decided by the candidate in consultation with the dissertation supervisor.

SO-704: Education and Modernization

Objective

The Course will provide a critical appraisal of the role of education as an agency of modernization in the developing countries with particular focus on the relationship between education and individual modernity in India. The pertinent question of this course is not whether or not education promotes modernity, but what is it about education that promotes modernity, under what conditions and how? The students are expected to have knowledge of the social functions of education and the interrelations of education and social change.

Course Content

Unit I

The Concept of Modernization

Issues in the Conceptualization of Modernization: Unit, Model, Direction, Convergence, Uniformitarianism and Universals

Societal Modernity and Individual Modernity: Conceptions and Measures

Unit II

Education as a Modernizing Agent

Education and Economic Development, Education and Individual Modernity – Theoretical Perspectives and Empirical Generalizations.

Unit III

Education and Student Modernity in India

Aspects of Education and Student Modernity – Spread, Level, Type, Curriculum, Teacher, Extracurricular Activities, Residence in Hostel; Education and Modernization in India

Unit IV

Role of Education in Developing Societies:

Emerging Critical Appraisals of the Role of Education in Developing Societies; Education in the era of globalization and education; Postmodernism and education

SO-706: Demographic and Health Transition in India

Objective

Rapid transition is taking place in demographic and health sectors in India. From the mid 70s state wise variations in major demographic components-fertility, mortality, age-structure; and health components- morbidity patterns, health and family welfare services and practices, reproductive and child health care, RTI/STI and HIV show interesting patterns. Some regions have progressed remarkably well in the past, as few are rapidly catching up, while others which had been considered 'sick' (BIMARU) in the past are showing promising results. The emerging picture overall indicates that in several areas there are unexpected changes in fertility, mortality and health components of populations, while in others, the pace of change is slow but noticeable. The focus of this course will be to study the transitions in fertility, mortality and health sectors in India, identify the linkages inducing such changes and study the future trends and consequences of these transitions.

Course Content

Unit-I

Demographic and Health Transition:
Theoretical Perspectives and Critical Review of Relevant Literature
Population Growth in India, Micro level and Interstate Variations
Past Trends, Current Levels and Future Scenario

Unit-II

Fertility Transition- National and State Levels:
Common Experience and Distinctive Patterns: The transition will be examined through several measures of fertility and reproduction. Existing explanatory models and linkages would be critically examined. In the light of new evidence, search for explanations will be carried through examining the specificity in fertility transition at the regional/state levels.

Unit-III

Mortality Transition- National and State Levels:

Common Experience and Distinctive Patterns: The transition will be examined through several measures of mortality-CDR, age specific mortality rates (${}_nq_x$), and life expectancy (e^Ox) and cause of death. Existing explanatory models and linkages would be critically examined in the light of new evidence of mortality patterns at the regional/state levels. Search for explanations will be carried through examining the specificity in mortality transition.

Unit-IV

Health Transition:

National and State Levels: Common Experience and Distinctive Patterns. The transition will be examined through changes in the morbidity patterns by age, sex and residence. Existing explanatory models and linkages would be critically examined in the light of new evidence of morbidity patterns at the regional/state levels. Special attention will be given to discuss the RTI/STI and HIV.

SO-713: Patterns of Urbanization in Developing Countries with Special Reference to Asia and Africa

Objective

All the major perspectives in Urban Sociology so far, have been formulated on the basis of western experience. The recent trends in urbanization and social change in developing countries, however, call for the need to develop alternative models to understand the patterns of urbanization in these societies, which no doubt, are significantly different from those experienced by the west. The present course, therefore, will familiarize the student with the existing perspectives on urban sociology and help to evaluate their relevance in the emerging trends of urban societies in developing countries, especially the Asian and the African.

Course Content

Unit-I
Existing theoretical orientations to urban sociology: demographic approach, Ecological approach, Technological approach, and Social disorganization approach.

Unit-II
Emerging pattern of urbanization in developing countries (with special reference to Asia and Africa): a historical sketch of urbanization and evolution of city in African and Asian societies, urbanization in colonial situation

Unit-III
Demographic transformation: Trends of migration, Rural-urban differences in demographic variables.

Unit-IV
Socio-cultural transformation in urban setting: Family, Kinship, Ethnicity, Stratification, Neighbourhood; Urbanization and urbanism – Social change in urban societies; Urbanism as a way of life; Relevance of folk-urban continuum perspective

SO-714: Integration and Conflict in Plural Societies

Objective

The paper reflects on the topical issue of pluralism with its related processes. It involves rethinking of social science categories such as pluralism and ethnicity, and seeks to make the students aware of the dynamics of plural societies by looking into case studies of some multi-cultural societies, as well as, examining ethnicity and pluralism in the Indian context.

Course Content

Unit I

Nature of Pluralism: Cultural, ethnic, linguistic, religious basis of Pluralism; Emergence of Plurality: Endogenous and exogenous factors (Migration)

Unit II

Modes of relationship in Plural Societies: Absorption, Assimilation, integration, accommodation, coexistence, Isolation, exclusion, conflict, extermination; Identity formation in Plural societies – Modalities of Retention, transformation and loss of identity.

Unit III

Case studies of Plural societies: India, U.S.A., Former USSR, Sri Lanka, Malaysia, Fiji, Mauritius, the West Indies, (Note only two case studies will be undertaken in any given semesters).

Unit IV

SO-716: Family Demography

Objective

Over a period of time the demographic transition has affected each and every society and consequently induced changes in family settings. This course will focus on examining the interaction between changes in demographic components on the one hand and size, composition and structure of family on the other. The main emphasis will be on comparative methods using illustrations from cross-cultural and cross-national situations. Major attention will be given to emerging trends in the European and non-European (Asia, Africa and Latin America) patterns at the macro level and inter-state variation in India at the micro level. The course formulation is, principally based on the family development and life course approaches. Students would also be exposed to other approaches to study the family demography.

Course Content

Unit-I

Introduction to Family Demography and its Forms and Substance: Family vs. Household; Sexual Union vs. Marriage; Demographic Dynamics (Fertility, Mortality, Migration, Age structure) vs. Family dynamics (Size, Composition and Structure).

Unit-II

Approaches: Structural, Functional, Family life cycles, Family Development, Life Course. Concepts – Major Data Sources: Sources of Historical Data, Census, Special Surveys NFHS, DHS, WFS, Family Surveys etc.

Unit-III

Family and Marriage: Family Formation Stage; Marriage and its Variations – Timings and Trends in Age at Marriage, Building Nest for Growth of Family: Planned efforts, natural course and accidents; Family Formation Stage- Effects of Fertility- Inter Parity Progress; Social Normative Constraints, Fertility preferences, Desired and Actual family; Childless families; Families with different size and composition of children.

Unit-IV

Squeezing Family – Effects of mortality, migration and marriage: Change in size, composition and structure of family, emerging forms of families in rural and urban areas, Single Parent Family-variations. Empty Nest Stage: Effect of Migration-emerging family Structure-Problems of Old Couples and Aging-Social, Economic and Health.
