B.Voc. (Global Professionals in Beauty & Aesthetics)

Title of the Programme: Bachelor of Vocation in Global Professionals in Beauty & Aesthetics leading to degree "B.Voc. (Global Professionals in Beauty & Aesthetics)"

Preamble: Beauty and Aesthetics is a fast, fun, trend setting and creative industry. There is a lot of scope for being your own boss, working in retail, styling the stars and working abroad. It's also hard work, as successful entrants need to work around their clients' lives. That can mean long hours, evenings and weekends. Typically, your first job may be in a salon or spa. It may also be used as a springboard to work for major retailers like Lakme, L'Oreal, Shahnaz, Habibs, etc., or for companies supplying this massive industry. Some skills experts secure employment on board cruise ships or in the film industry. The skills you will learn such as customer service and selling skills are really transferable to almost all business contexts should you want to take a different direction in due course. The hair and beauty industry itself is a billion dollar industry. Training in areas that are in increasing demand will help achieve employability in a sure shot way. For hairdressing these include barbering, hair extensions, chemical straightening, plaiting and braiding. In beauty, nail art, micro dermabrasion, cellulite programmes and non-surgical facelifts are popular with customers whilst spas require people for hot stone therapy, alternative massage therapies, and specialist heat treatments. Understanding sales and retail, business planning, finance marketing is as important.

Beauty bloggers and critics are something of a phenomenon these days. With the increasing number of untrained people who are successfully running their own beauty and wellness advice sites and blogs, we can well imagine what a trained expert can do. With fashion and makeup becoming a rampage, we don't need to think twice about the choice we are making because employability is almost ensured.

Another inviting field open to the candidate after the course is the aesthetic laser market. It has undergone rapid expansion since the first aesthetic laser machines were approved for use by the FDA in the early 1990's. The first laser aesthetic equipment was machines designed for administration of unwanted hair reduction treatments. The aesthetic laser market today still includes laser hair removal machines but has expanded enormously and features many other types of aesthetic laser machines designed for fat reduction ("laser liposuction") skin rejuvenation, scar removal, acne treatments and much more. The Aesthetic laser market today spans from laser epilation through several laser skin treatments to aesthetic laser fat reduction and body sculpting. The ability to direct laser energy with pinpoint accuracy is what makes this technology so appealing and useful in the med aesthetic field, as is the case with the use of laser for many other purposes. In view of the past we must admit that predicting how the aesthetic laser market will look ten, even five years from now is hard. There is one thing which seems to characterize the market, once new uses for aesthetic laser are found they tend to ever remain part of the treatment options med aesthetic clinics offer.

Industry is forever on lookout for fresh talent. They require skilled workers who have a pragmatic and professional approach; who are efficient at what they do and leave minimal enrollment liabilities for the employer. The specified vocational course aims at the specified fields. It aims to enhance employment and entrepreneurship possibilities for those who are enrolled, opening an array of options from which to choose from.
