Paper III: Women's Development and Work in India Time: 3 Hours

Objective: This paper focuses on the issues related to the processes of development and its impact on women, particularly in the context of a developing nation like India. The attempt is to equip the students to understand major aspects of critique of development through a gender lens and its global and local contexts. This course further examines the entire concept of work, both paid and unpaid, changing nature and patterns of women's work, and the value of women's work to society, with a special focus on India. A central concern of the course is the problems encountered by women workers and the effort made at various levels for women's inclusion in the labour force as well as alleviating their problems.
