M.A. POLITICAL SCIENCE

SEMESTER SYSTEM (2026–27)

(Under National Education Policy 2020)

The M.A. Programme in Political Science is designed to impart training in the fundamentals of the discipline of political science. It incorporates the latest advances in the discipline at the global level while retaining the specificity of the Indian context. It aims to provide a firm grounding in the key areas of the discipline, namely, Political Philosophy, International Relations, Comparative Politics and Indian Politics, thereby enabling students to choose their specialization in line with their academic and professional goals. In addition to an interdisciplinary approach, the newly designed MA Programme integrates training in research methodology and encourages application of methodological tools and skills as part of its pedagogy. The academic and co-curricular activities regularly undertaken by the Department in the form of seminars and talks as well as the various student-led clubs and forums ably supplement the programme to provide a comprehensive, holistic and multi-faceted education.

The aims of the programme are:

- Provide strong foundation in the key areas of the discipline in keeping with global trends and regional concerns
- Develop analytic ability and critical thinking that equip students to make connections between theory and practice and produce empirically informed, theoretically grounded analysis
- Promote interdisciplinarity and a strong methodological focus in approaching political processes
- Develop professional competencies for research, teaching, public services, governance, journalism and policy studies
- Integrate classroom learning with fieldwork, internships, projects, and experiential learning.

Programme Structure and Duration (NEP-Compliant)

The Master of Arts degree in Political Science shall be awarded in the following four combinationsclassified under two broad categories:

a) Two YearsDegree

(i) Two YearsMaster of Arts with Research(M.A.Res.)followingCoursework&Research.

Teaching–Learning Pedagogy

The teaching–learning pedagogy of the programme is learner-centric, outcome-oriented, and supported by Information and Communication Technology (ICT). It combines lectures and interactive discussions with seminars, student presentations, case studies, simulations, and role play, alongside term papers, policy briefs, writing assignments, field visits, internships, and project work. This blended pedagogical approach is designed to strengthen students' analytical and evaluative capacities, research and writing skills, and communication abilities, while also fostering leadership, teamwork, people skills, and the competence to effectively navigate public institutions and professional environments.

Assessment and Evaluation

Evaluation follows a continuous assessment system as per University norms:

- Internal Assessment: Tests, assignments, presentations, class participation
- End-Semester Examination: Conducted by the University

Dissertations, projects, internships, and fieldwork shall be evaluated as per approved guidelines, including presentation/viva-voce where applicable.Plagiarism checks are mandatory as per UGC and Panjab University regulations.

SWAYAM and Credit Transfer

Students may, with the approval of JAAC of the Department and in accordance with UGC and Panjab University guidelines, earn eligible credits through courses offered on the SWAYAM portal, which may be integrated into the programme as per the prescribed credit transfer mechanism.

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 Marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Description/Objectives:
This is an advanced course in studying the legal and constitutional text that shapes the architecture of Indian polity. The discussion over the course content would help the students to not only have an insight into the original intent of the Constituent Assembly members while setting up the constitutional institutions and offices but also frame the provisions related to the rights of the citizens. Students who have already read the courses focusing on the Constitution of India will now be better acquainted with the constitutional principles, including the interpretation of the constitutional laws by the higher judiciary, which provide the bedrock on which the institutions are founded, and also how they have functioned since independence.

Learning Outcomes:
On successful completion of the course, students would be able to get a basic idea of the constitutional antecedents, the Process of the making of the Constitution, explain the linkage between the constitution, colonial rule and the socio-political contestations surrounding constitution-making. Students will have an idea of Constitution, Constitutionalism, Constitutional Morality. They will be able to comprehend the founding principles of India's Constitutional Democracy. This course enables students to grasp the issues that were the subject of intense debates in the Constituent Assembly, how the Indian Constitution protects the civic and political rights of the citizens and communities?Students will be able to analyse the idea of the basic structure of the constitution/doctrine of checks and balances

Pedagogy of the Course:
The students will be learning about the course contents through class room lectures followed by discussions. The focus would be on reading the original constitutional and legal text including the judgments followed by the scholarly interpretations.The students would be assessed on the basis of written examination comprising of 80 marks and continuous internal assessment of 20 marks on the basis of Unit test, Snap test, Class Attendance, Class assignments and Class Room participations.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.
(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.
(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

DSE: Discipline Specific Elective

COURSE CODE: MAPOLDSE-401

Introduction to Research Methodology

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course introduces students to the fundamentals of research methodology in the social sciences. It aims to develop the ability to design aresearch by identifying problems, formulating questions, reviewing literature, and constructing hypotheses. Students will gain familiarity with qualitative and quantitative methods and with primary and secondary data sources, including archives, official statistics, and field-generated materials. The course also cultivates ethical awareness by explaining core principles of research ethics and helping students understand and avoid plagiarism in all its forms.

Learning Outcomes:
By the end of the course, students will be able to identify key concepts in social science research and explain the steps involved in designing a study. They will be able to apply qualitative and quantitative methods to fundamental research tasks and analyse different data sources for relevance and credibility. Students will evaluate ethical concerns, including plagiarism, in real research situations and will finally create coherent research proposals that integrate appropriate methods, data, and ethical principles.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The course will be taught through a mix of interactive lectures using ICT, thematic discussions and case-based analysis of relevant topics. Students will engage with official documents and data to deepen conceptual understanding. Group activities, short research tasks and simulations will encourage application of theory. Critical reflection and comparative inquiry will be emphasised throughout.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

Public Administration

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course aims to introduce students to Public Administration as a discipline by explaining its nature, scope, and evolution. It develops understanding of organizational principles, personnel and financial administration, administrative law, and control mechanisms. The course also familiarizes learners with administrative reforms, accountability institutions, and the functioning of executive, legislative, and judicial systems in India.

Learning Outcomes:
After completing this course, students will be able to define core concepts of public administration, explain organizational principles, analyze personnel and financial administration systems, apply administrative law concepts, evaluate control and accountability mechanisms, and assess administrative reforms and institutions such as Lokpal, tribunals, and audit bodies within the Indian administrative framework.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The course will be taught through a mix of interactive lectures using ICT, thematic discussions and case-based analysis of relevant topics. Students will engage with official documents and data to deepen conceptual understanding. Group activities, short research tasks and simulations will encourage application of theory. Gender and Politics in India

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course uses the lens of gender to examine and analyse modern Indian politics. It engages with key issues in political science- state structures, social power, economic policy, cultural and identity conflicts – from the perspective of gender. The course aims to familiarize students with the scholarship from the interdisciplinary fields of gender and feminist studies and equip them with the tools of gender analysis that can be applied to understand a broad range of events, phenomena, policies and processes.

Learning Outcomes:
At the end of the course, the student will acquire knowledge of the scholarship on gender in India and be equipped to critically examine and analyse Indian politics and society from a gender perspective. The student will be able to discern the underlying theoretical concerns and develop arguments about laws, policies and institutions in terms of their underlying assumptions on gender and implications for gender structures.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The students will be assessed on the basis of written examination comprising of 80 marks and continuous internal assessment of 20 marks on the basis of Unit test, Snap test, Attendance, Class assignments and class room participations.

Contemporary Debates on Nations and Nationalisms

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course aims to explore the historical developments, major theories, and contemporary challenges of national identity and nation-states in an increasingly interconnected world. The syllabus would cover core concepts, historical case studies, and modern debates.

Learning Outcomes:
Upon completion of the course, students should be able to comprehend the main theoretical models in the study of nationalism. They should be able to analyse the historical development of nations and nationalisms, particularly the formation of modern European nation-states. It would also help them assess contemporary issues such as ethnic conflict, migration, and supranationalism through the lens of nationalism.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The course will be taught through a mix of interactive lectures using ICT, thematic discussions and case-based analysis of relevant topics. Students will engage with official documents and data to deepen conceptual understanding. Group activities, short research tasks and simulations will encourage application of theory. Critical reflection and comparative inquiry will be emphasised throughout.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

Theories of International Relations

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
The course aims to develop the students' understanding and perspective on international relation's theories from the basics to the advanced level. It explains various emerging approaches and theories reflecting on how and why nations engage with one another on issues of domestic and international significance.

Learning Outcomes:
This course enables students to build on previously taught basic concepts by introducing them to the advanced level of understanding international relations. This course is designed to incorporate the relatively recent theoretical and conceptual interventions in international relations that build on the previously taught basic concepts and classical theoretical frameworks.

Pedagogy of the Course:
Classroom discussions, analysis of key readings, debates, and live examples will be utilised as pedagogical tools. Students will be assessed based on a written examination of 80 marks and a continuous internal assessment of 20 marks, including unit tests, snap tests, attendance, class assignments, and classroom participation.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(iv) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.
(v) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.
(vi) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

Comparative Politics: Understanding Developed Countries

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

The course aims to provide students with an in depth understanding of how developed political systems work by introducing major comparative approaches, explaining the core features of modernity in Western societies and examining the evolution of the modern welfare state and civil society. It also familiarizes students with the constitutional frameworks of developed countries and helps them to analyse the role of political parties and interest groups in shaping democratic processes. Overall, the course develops the ability to compare institutions, political behaviour and governance patterns across advanced societies in a systematic and informed manner.

Learning Outcomes:

- At the end of the course students will be able to develop a clear understanding of the major concepts and approaches used to study political systems in developed societies.
- Students will gain the ability to explain how social, economic and institutional factors shape politics in advanced democracies.
- Students will be able to use comparative analysis to interpret similarities and differences across political structures and processes in developed countries.

Pedagogy of the Course:

Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

Public Institutions in India

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

While the focus in the sub-discipline of Indian politics has mainly been on the political processes, the study of public institutions has been lacking. This paper tries to address this gap by taking up the study of some of the federal institutions. The study of the institutions under focus—constitutional or statutory—has two components. The first one is to study the original intent with which the institutions were set up and the purpose they were to serve. The second component is whether the institutions have been able to live up to the mark, an assessment of the performance of the institutions since their formation. Also, the debate involving these institutions' work and the challenges they face.

Learning Outcomes:

The students opting for this course would be able to:

- Evaluate critically a wide range of India's fundamental federal institutions, which are essential for providing fundamental governance.
- Examine the public sector's ability to manage the significant changes India has undergone since independence using an interdisciplinary approach.

Pedagogy of the Course:

The students will be learning about the course contents through class room lectures followed by discussions. The focus would be on reading the original constitutional and legal text including the judgments followed by the scholarly interpretations. The course would encourage students to get acquainted with the debates and make their own assessment about the institutions under focus. The students would be assessed on the basis of written examination comprising of 90 marks and continuous internal assessment of 20 marks on the basis of Unit test, Snap test, Class Attendance, Class assignments and Class Room participations.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Transnational Actors in International Politics

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

The course is designed to introduce the students to the changing dynamics of the emerging world order in which various transnational actors have come to play an increasinglyimportant role in shaping the responses of the state actors to some of the most crucial issues in contemporary history.

Learning Outcomes:

On completion of this course, students will understand shifts from state-centric to transnational frameworks, analyze types and roles of transnational actors, examine post-war economic institutions and regional integration processes, evaluate resource cartelization and environmental governance, and critically assess the implications of transnational dynamics for power, cooperation, and conflict in contemporary international politics.

Pedagogy of the Course:

Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

India in World Affairs

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

The course aims to familiarise students with the historical evolution of India's foreign policy and its major determinants. It further examines the key concepts and philosophical ideas that informed its evolution from the pre-independent period to the present times. Against this backdrop, the course analyses certain key concepts that Indian foreign policy adhered to such as non-alignment and its relevance, especially after the end of the Cold War. The course finally introduces the students to various themes associated with Indian foreign policy such as regionalism, nuclear politics, non-traditional security and the processes of globalisation.

Learning Outcomes:

The course will help students to better appreciate the changes that the shifting nature of the world order has induced into the more enduring elements and themes of Indian foreign policy. At the same time, they would also be able to understand the reasons behind India's growing assertion on the world stage as an important international actor in the light of its role in various global regimes.

Pedagogy of the Course:

Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

Themes and Perspectives in Contemporary Political Philosophy

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

1. To provide knowledge of the central themes and perspectives in contemporary political theory
2. To enable students to grasp the philosophical assumptions, conceptual frameworks and mode of argumentation deployed in these perspectives
3. To enable the student to connect the theoretical debates to contemporary key debates and issues
4. To develop the analytical and theoretical tools to critically compare different perspectives and identify areas of convergence and contestation

Learning Outcomes:

At the end of the course, the student will:

1. Acquire comprehensive knowledge of the scholarship on contemporary political theory
2. Interpret and critically examine key theoretical and philosophical texts
3. Assess the relevance of the theories and perspectives to contemporary issues
4. Learn to choose the appropriate framework and apply it to real world issues and events and develop theoretical arguments about them

Pedagogy of the Course:

The students will be assessed on the basis of written examination comprising of 80 marks and continuous internal assessment of 20 marks on the basis of Unit test, Snap test, Attendance, Class assignments and class room participations.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(iv) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(v) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

Gender in International Relations

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

This course is gender 'in' International Relations. It introduces the students to how gender is a category of analysis in international relations and in researching global politics. The course enables the students to analyse the embedded hierarchies of masculinities and femininities that shape and sustain the actors and concepts of IR such as state, sovereignty, conflict, war, peace, and foreign policy. How these gender constructions impact the lives of particular groups of people in international political economy.

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, students will understand gender as a category of analysis to the study of international relations and identify key feminist methodologies and epistemologies shaping the field. They will analyse how sovereignty, and security are gendered, and evaluate the role of hegemonic masculinities in state and nationalist practices. Students will also examine gendered dimensions of war, militarism, and queer critiques, and assess emerging debates on feminist foreign policy and gendered multilateralism. Students will develop an understanding of the hierarchical coding of masculinity and femininity that pervades social, economic and political relations and institutional practices of individuals, groups, communities and nation-states.

Pedagogy of the Course:

The course will use a blend of lectures, critical discussions, and close readings of feminist and queer IR scholarship to build conceptual clarity and analytical depth. Case studies, documentaries, and policy analysis exercises will enable students to apply gendered perspectives to contemporary global issues. Short reflection papers, debates, and group presentations will encourage active engagement and foster critical thinking about gender, power, and international relations.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

RBC: Research Based Course

COURSE CODE: MAPOLRBC-501

Fundamentals of Social Science Research

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course introduces students to foundational knowledge of social science research by familiarizing them with key concepts such as epistemology, ontology, and methodology. It aims to help them understand how ideas, theories, and approaches shape inquiry and to train them to formulate research problems, conduct literature reviews, and identify gaps. Students will learn to construct hypotheses and understand diverse forms of data, including primary and secondary sources. Overall, the course aims to build analytical skills essential for designing rigorous and contextually grounded research.

Learning Outcomes:
By the end of this course, students will understand the philosophical foundations of the social sciences, how concepts, theories, and approaches guide inquiry, and how to apply research design principles to develop clear questions and hypotheses. They will analyse scholarly literature to identify gaps, evaluate the suitability of different data sources and methods, and create a preliminary research framework that reflects methodological coherence and academic rigour.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The course will be taught through a blend of interactive lectures, guided discussions, and concept-building exercises to strengthen foundational understanding. Students will engage with research articles, case studies, and short writing tasks to connect theory with practice. Workshops on formulating research questions, reviewing literature, and identifying data sources will foster hands-on learning. Collaborative activities and feedback sessions will help students refine their analytical and methodological skills throughout the course.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.

Course Contents

Unit I: Introduction to Research in Social Sciences

What is research, and why do we need social science research?
Understanding Key Terms: Epistemology, Ontology and Methodology

Unit II: Concepts, Theories and Approaches

Concept: Meaning and use in research
Theory: Meaning and Types of Theory, Elements of a Theory
Approaches: Elements of an Approach, Identifying appropriate approaches

Unit III: Research Design

Research Problem and Central Research Question
Literature Review and Identifying Gaps in Scholarship
Hypothesis/Tentative Assumptions

Unit IV: Data in Research

What constitutes data in social sciences?

Contemporary South Asia

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

The course aims to familiarise students with the complex realities of the South Asian region by highlighting its shared colonial legacy, diverse physical and political settings, and intriguing social and cultural mosaic. It provides a comprehensive historical overview of significant events since 1947, including independence movements, major wars, nuclear tests, and democratic transitions. It highlights the strategic relevance of contemporary South Asia by showcasing the role of external powers, such as the USA and China, in the region.

Learning Outcomes

After the course, students will be equipped to make sense of the region's history and contextualise the varied complex issues facing the different states in the area. They would also be able to appreciate the strategic significance of the region and understand the role of transnational actors in forging peace and stability in the region. An understanding of the role of external actors such as the USA and China in the regional theatre would be an asset in making sense of the regional tensions, given the presence of two nuclear powers in the region.

Pedagogy of the Course:

Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. Re-thinking Geopolitics: Critical Perspectives

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course is based on the premise that geopolitics needs to be re-conceptualized as the twenty- first century unfolds. The intention is to rethink and radicalize its components 'geo' and 'politics' so that the self-evident character and nuance of the sign 'geopolitics' can be conceptualized and pluralized. Once conceptualized in a critical way as a problematic of geopolitics or geographical politics, geopolitics becomes a much broader social and cultural phenomena that is normally described and understood by the geopolitical tradition of 'wise-men' statecraft.

Learning Outcomes
At the end of this course the students will be able to re-conceptualize geopolitics from a critical perspective. They will be able to rethink and radicalize its components 'geo' and 'politics' so that the self-evident character and nuance of the sign 'geopolitics' can be conceptualized and pluralized. They will be able to pluralize and problematized geopolitics as a broader social and cultural phenomena that is normally described and understood by the geopolitical tradition of 'wise-men' statecraft.

Dalit Movements and Issues in India

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:

The purpose of this paper is to make students familiar with major Dalit Movements and the central issues affecting Dalit communities in modern India. The course examines the historical emergence, ideological foundations, and political strategies of Dalit movements from the colonial period to the present. It explores key themes such as caste oppression, social justice, identity, political representation, constitutional rights, and emancipation through the study of important leaders, organizations, and movements. By engaging with primary texts, historical accounts, and contemporary debates, the course enables students to critically understand the role of Dalit movements in shaping modern Indian politics and society.

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the course students would be able to:

- Explain the ideology and practices of major Dalit movements across different historical periods and contexts in India.
- Analyse how mobilization by Dalit movements and political parties shapes social and political identities, particularly in response to state processes.
- Assessthe contributions of key Dalit leaders in promoting social justice and fostering an egalitarian society.
- Critically evaluate the strategies, achievements, and challenges of Dalit movements within the broader landscape of Indian politics and society.
- Identify and evaluate major contemporary issues facing Dalit communities, including caste-based discrimination, social exclusion, and economic marginalization.

Pedagogy of the Course:

Learning methods comprise of pedagogical methods such as class room lectures and student-teacher interactions, group discussions, seminars and assignments etc.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

RBC COURSE

COURSE CODE: MAPOLRBC-502

Social Science Research: Data, Research Writing and Ethics

Total Credits: 4 credits (Theory: 45 hrs. + Tutorial: 15 hrs.)

Max.Marks	:	100 marks
Theory	:	80 marks
Int. Ass.	:	20 marks
Time	:	3 hours

Course Objectives:
This course aims to equip students with the ability to systematically collect, organize, and interpret data in research. It introduces quantitative tools such as surveys, descriptive and inferential statistics, correlation, and regression, alongside qualitative methods including interviews, ethnography, and discourse analysis. Students will learn to craft coherent academic arguments, structure research papers effectively, and apply ethical principles throughout the research process, recognizing issues such as plagiarism, falsification, and fabrication.

Learning Outcomes:
By the end of this course, students will understand key quantitative and qualitative data collection techniques and apply appropriate methods for analyzing statistical and textual data. They will interpret descriptive and inferential results, evaluate qualitative findings through content and discourse analysis, and construct clear academic arguments in well-structured research papers. Students will also demonstrate awareness of ethical principles in research and identify violations such as plagiarism, falsification, and fabrication.

Pedagogy of the Course:
The course will follow a practice-oriented approach using lectures, demonstrations, and hands-on data exercises. Students will work with sample datasets to apply quantitative tools and conduct guided qualitative analyses using transcripts and field notes. Workshops on academic writing will help them develop arguments and structure research papers. Discussions on research ethics, case studies, and short reflective tasks will encourage critical thinking and responsible research practices.

Instructions for Paper-setter and candidates:

(i) The theory question paper will be of 80 marks and 20 marks will be for internal assessment.

(ii) For private candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

(iii) The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

The syllabus has been divided into four units. There shall be 9 questions in all. The first question is compulsory and shall be a short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions carrying 20 marks i.e. 2 marks for each. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions, and the candidates shall be given internal choice of attempting one question from each Unit in all. Each question will carry 15 marks.
