Paper XIII: AIH 113: Indian Numismatics- I

Max. Marks: 100
Theory: 60 Marks
Practical: 20 Marks
Internal assessment: 20 Marks
Time: 3 Hours

Objectives:
The course aims to acquaint the students with the study of ancient coins of India that forms an integral and significant part of the discipline. It is our endeavour to make the students familiar with the decipherment of the legends and identification of the coins.

Pedagogy of the course work:
The students are to be acquainted with the history, provenance, and technique of manufacturing, fabric, metrology, metallurgy, types, symbols, legends and devices on the coins with the help of photographs /slides.

Note:

1. The Paper-setter is required to set 9 questions in all and the candidates are required to attempt five questions in all.
2. The first question, which is compulsory, shall be short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the entire syllabus to be answered in 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to answer any ten short questions i.e. of 2 marks each (2 X 10 = 20).
3. The rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. The entire syllabus has been divided into 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions and the candidate shall be given internal choice, i.e. the candidate shall attempt one question from each unit.Each question will carry 15 marks.
4. The practical part will include report, written question and viva-voce examination

Unit I
History of Coinage
Debate on origin, evolution and antiquity of Coins.
Minting techniques and Terminology

Unit II
Punch Marked Coins
The distribution of Punch Marked Coins:
Main features of local and Imperial punch marked coins;
Significance of Punch Marked Coins.

Paper XIV: AIH 114: Archaeological Methods and Techniques- I.

Max. Marks: 100
Theory: 60 Marks
Practical: 20 Marks
Internal assessment: 20 Marks
Time: 3 Hours

Objectives:

The broad objective of the course is to introduce students to the basics of archaeological methods and techniques.

Pedagogy of the course work:

The aim of the course is to impart conceptual knowledge about the nature, methodology and substance of archaeology. Beside this the applied aspect of archaeology is explained through field trips which are a compulsory component of this course. The departmental museum collection also enables students to get acquainted with excavated material.

Note:

1. The Paper-setter is required to set 9 questions in all in theory paper and the candidates are required to attempt five questions in all.
2. The first question, which is compulsory, shall be short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the entire syllabus to be answered in 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to answer any ten short questions i.e. of 2 marks each (2 X 10 = 20).
3. The rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. The entire syllabus has been divided into 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions and the candidate shall be given internal choice, i.e., the candidate shall attempt one question from each unit. Each question will carry 10 marks.
4. The practical paper shall comprise of field trip and practical file, drawing of stone tools, written test and viva-voce.

UNIT I:

The Nature and Aims of archaeology: Development of Archaeology in India and Europe.

UNIT II:

The Various Disciplines Co-ordinating the Study and Analysis of Archaeological Evidence.

UNIT III:

Conservation and Protection of Monuments.

UNIT IV:

Methods of Dating: Relative and Absolute or Chronometric Dating methods.

Paper XV: AIH 115: Research Methodology

Max. Marks: 100
Theory: 80 Marks
Internal Assessment: 20 Marks
Time: 3 Hours

Objectives:

The Main objective of the paper is to introduce the students to the research methodology and to equip them to carry out plagiarism free research.

Pedagogy:

The course will be taught through lectures and practical exercises to develop students' research skills. Students will learn qualitative and quantitative methods, analyze primary and secondary sources, and practice selecting research topics, framing questions, and organizing data. Training will be given in footnoting, bibliography writing, proofreading, and drafting research papers. The use of maps, tables, graphs, and AI tools will be introduced, with emphasis on research ethics and avoidance of plagiarism.

Note:

1. The Paper-setter is required to set 9 questions in all in theory paper and the candidates are required to attempt five questions in all.
2. The first question, which is compulsory, shall be short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the entire syllabus to be answered in 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to answer any ten short questions i.e. of 2 marks each (2 X 10 = 20).
3. The rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. The entire syllabus has been divided into 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions and the candidate shall be given internal choice, i.e., the candidate shall attempt one question from each unit. Each question will carry 10 marks.
4. The practical paper shall comprise of field trip and practical file, drawing of stone tools, written test and viva-voce.

UNIT I

Introduction to the concepts of qualitative and quantitative research methods.
Examination and analysis of both primary and secondary sources
Use of oral tradition, museum records and newspaper.

UNIT II

Choice of a subject and rational of a research problem
Formulation of Research Questions and objectives
Preparing tentative chapterization

UNIT III

Organization of Data
Footnoting and Bibliography
Proof reading and final draft

UNIT IV

Introducing new tools for research
Use of maps, digrams, survey tables and graphs
Application of AI for research purpose
Research ethics
Plagiarism and forgery.

Paper XVI: AIH 116: Protohistoric Archaeology

Max. Marks: 100
Theory: 60 Marks
Practical: 20 Marks
Internal Assessment: 20 Marks
Time: 3 Hours

Objectives:

This course is a survey of the protohistoric background from the early Harappan period to approximately the time of the early Buddhist and Jaina texts. The main focus of the course is on the problems of interpretation of archaeological data.

Pedagogy of the Course work:

Class lectures are accompanied by field-trips to important archaeological sites. In the above paper there is an unqualified concern with the geographically multilinear character of the archaeological development of the subcontinent. Throughout the discourse the emphasis is on the disco-ntinuity of stereotyped linear progression of archaeological cultures. Major theoretical debates about the nature and transformations of various protohistoric cultures are also incorporated.

Note:

1. The Paper-setter is required to set 9 questions in all in theory Paper and the candidates are required to attempt five questions in all.
2. The first question, which is compulsory, shall be short answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the entire syllabus to be answered in 25 to 30 words each. The candidates are required to answer any ten short questions i.e., of 2 marks each (2 X 10 = 20).
3. The rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. The entire syllabus has been divided into 4 units. Each unit shall have two questions and the candidate shall be given internal choice, i.e., the candidate shall attempt one question from each unit. Each question will carry 10 marks.
1. The practical paper shall comprise of field trip and practical file, identification of pottery-types, Written test and viva-voce.

UNIT I:

The Harappan Civilization:

The Early Harappan phase.

The Mature phase: extent, nature and character of settlements, morphology of Harappan sites (Monenjo-Daro, Harappa, Banawali , Surkotada, Kalibangan, Lothal, Dholavira), agrarian base, metals and minerals, trade and commerce, art and architecture, , crafts, seals and sealings, script, glimpses of rituals and beliefs.

Paper XX: AIH 120: Trends in the Historiography of Early India.

Max. Marks: 100
Theory: 80 Marks
Internal Assessment: 20 Marks
Time: 3 Hours

Objective:

The course aims to introduce students to major historiographical approaches to the study of Early Indian History. It examines Colonial, Nationalist, and Marxist interpretations and familiarizes students with emerging perspectives such as Gender and Environmental studies. The course enables students to understand how historical narratives are shaped by different ideological frameworks and encourages critical analysis of historical writing and methodology

Pedagogy of the course:

The course will be taught through lectures, discussions, and critical reading of selected historical writings. Students will compare different historiographical approaches and engage in classroom debates and short assignments to develop analytical skills. Emphasis will be placed on understanding interpretation, bias, and changing perspectives in the writing of Early Indian History

Note:
