PAPER: DSC- WS-104- Opt (i): Women and Education in India

Time: 3 Hours

Max. Marks: 100

Objectives: This course examines the historical trajectory of women's education in India from ancient times through the 19th-century social reform movements. It further aims to identify the socio-economic, cultural, and geographical barriers that contributes to gender disparities in literacy, enrollment, and retention and to explore the role of education as a tool for social transformation, vocational empowerment, and skill development for marginalized women. To evaluate the National Policies, Commissions, and recent governmental initiatives aimed at bridging the gender gap in education.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:

1. Understand the importance of women's education as a tool for empowerment and social transformation.
2. Analyse the historical evolution of women's education in ancient, medieval, and colonial India.
3. Evaluate the contribution of social reformers and educational initiatives toward promoting women's education during the colonial period.
4. Examine gender disparities in enrolment and retention at primary, secondary, and higher education levels.

PAPER: DSC- WS-104- Option (ii): Women and Health

Time:3Hours

Max. Marks: 100

Objectives: This course introduces health as a gendered construct, analyzing how social hierarchies and patriarchal structures differentially impact the health experiences of women and men. It evaluates the status of women's health in India through the lens of human rights while critically examining national health policies and international frameworks. Students will gain an understanding of the intersectional factors such as violence, environment, and economy that define women's physical and mental well-being.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:

1. Understand the concepts and dimensions of health, public health, social health, and women's health from a gender perspective.
2. Analyse gender as a social determinant of health and its impact on women's well-being.
3. Develop an understanding of health as a fundamental human right.
4. Examine socio-cultural and economic barriers affecting women's access to healthcare services.
5. Interpret major health indicators in India, including Maternal Mortality Ratio (MMR), Infant Mortality Rate (IMR), nutritional status, fertility, and life expectancy.
6. Understand the concepts of sexual and reproductive health and the indicators used to measure them.
7. Analyse important issues related to adolescent health, menstrual health, and conditions such as Polycystic Ovary Syndrome and Polycystic Ovary Disease.
8. Evaluate issues related to maternal health, including repeated pregnancies, contraception, family planning, and safe delivery practices.
9. Examine the factors affecting women's mental health in different social and economic contexts.
10. Assess occupational and environmental health hazards faced by women in informal sectors, agriculture, and home-based industries.
11. Critically analyse the impact of climate change, indoor air pollution, and the lack of clean fuel on women's health.
12. Develop an understanding of emerging issues in women's health, including Assisted Reproductive Technologies (ART), surrogacy laws, and health concerns of aging women.
13. Evaluate major health policies and government programmes such as the National Health Policy, National Rural Health Mission, Reproductive and Child Health Programme, Janani Suraksha Yojana, and Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana.
14. Apply gender-sensitive perspectives in understanding women's health issues, healthcare policies, and public health challenges in India.

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to develop an understanding of inter sectionality and its relevance in gender studies by examining how caste, class, religion, ethnicity, disability, and location shape gendered experiences and inequalities. It seeks to critically analyze disparities in education, health, work, and political participation through an intersectional perspective. The course also aims to familiarize students with gender-inclusive policies and frameworks in India for promoting equality, inclusion, and social justice.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes: After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the meaning and concept of intersectionality and analyze gender as a social and intersectional category.
2. Examine the intersection of caste, class, religion, ethnicity, region, and gender in shaping women's experiences and inequalities in India.
2. Critically analyse the contributions of Jyotirao Phule and B. R. Ambedkar in understanding caste and gender oppression.
3. Develop an understanding of privilege, marginalisation, and multiple identities in the context of gender relations.
4. Analyze intersectional dimensions of gender inequality with reference to rural and urban women, Dalit women, tribal women, and minority women in areas such as education, health, work participation, unpaid care work, and political participation.
5. Understand the meaning, importance, and application of gender analysis in development studies and policy planning.
6. Evaluate major gender analysis frameworks including the Harvard Analytical Framework, Moser Framework, and Longwe Framework.
7. Examine the role of gender mainstreaming and inclusive approaches in development planning and governance.
8. Assess gender-inclusive policies and programmes in India, including gender budgeting, Mission Shakti, SHe-Box, and Vigyan Jyoti.
9. Understand institutional mechanisms and support initiatives related to workplace safety, women in science and technology, and women farmers.
10. Critically examine the challenges in implementing gender-inclusive policies and programmes in India.
11. Apply intersectional and gender-sensitive perspectives in analysing social inequalities, development policies, and women's empowerment initiatives.

PAPER: DSC- WS-204- Opt (ii): Women and Environment

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to develop an understanding of the gendered dimensions of environmental degradation and the climate crisis by examining women not only as vulnerable groups but also as strategic leaders in climate adaptation and sustainability initiatives. It seeks to provide students with knowledge of national and international climate governance frameworks through a gender-sensitive perspective. The course further aims to bridge traditional ecofeminist theories with contemporary materialist approaches to climate justice, enabling critical analysis of environment, development, and gender relations.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand key concepts related to environment and climate change, including global warming, carbon footprint, mitigation, adaptation, climate justice, Common but Differentiated Responsibilities (CBDR), loss and damage, and sustainable environmental practices.
2. Analyse the relationship between gender and environment and explain why environmental issues disproportionately affect women.
3. Examine major environmental concerns such as deforestation, biodiversity loss, land degradation, pollution, waste management, food security, urbanisation, and the role of minor and non-timber forest produce in women's livelihoods.
4. Critically evaluate the impact of climate change and environmental degradation on women with reference to livelihood, migration, health, fuel and food collection, and time poverty.
5. Develop an understanding of biodiversity, climate change, and the impact of land, water, and forest degradation on women and local communities.
6. Analyse women's participation in natural resource management, social forestry, and community-based environmental conservation initiatives.
7. Examine the impact of environmental pollutants and ecological degradation on women's health and well-being.
8. Understand the role of women in environmental movements such as the Chipko Movement, Appiko Movement, Narmada Bachao Andolan, and the Silent Valley Movement.
9. Evaluate international environmental movements and youth-led climate activism, including the Green Belt Movement and the Fridays for Future led by activists such as Wangari Maathai, Greta Thunberg, and Licypriya Kangujam.
10. Assess the contribution of Mahila Mandals, Self-Help Groups, and social forestry programmes in community development, conservation, and family health and nutrition.
11. Understand international and national policy frameworks related to climate action, including the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, Paris Agreement, the Sustainable Development Goals with special reference to Goal 13, Mission LiFE, the National Action Plan on Climate Change, and the Forest Rights Act.

PAPER: DSC- WS-204- Opt (iii): Women and Media

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to develop a critical understanding of media and its gendered dimensions across print, visual, digital, and social platforms. It seeks to examine the representation of women in media and analyse the role of media in shaping gender identities, public perceptions, and consumer culture. The course also focuses on the empowering potential of media in advocacy, education, and activism while addressing contemporary concerns such as AI-generated content, online abuse, and digital safety. Further, it aims to evaluate gender inequalities within media industries and the effectiveness of legal and ethical frameworks in protecting women's rights and dignity.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand different forms of media, including print, audio-visual, digital, and social media platforms, and their role in shaping public opinion and gender perceptions.
2. Develop an understanding of major theoretical frameworks related to media and representation, including the Male Gaze, Cultural Hegemony, and Encoding and Decoding theories.
3. Critically analyse the representation of women in print and audio-visual media and examine the role of media in constructing gender identities and stereotypes.
4. Evaluate the negative impacts of media, including objectification, appearance anxiety, consumerism, voyeurism, yellow journalism, and the normalisation of gender-based violence.
5. Examine the empowering role of media in advocacy, activism, social movements, education, healthcare, communication, and economic participation of women, especially marginalised groups.
6. Understand the concept of Technology-Facilitated Gender-Based Violence (TFGBV), including cyber stalking, doxxing, and deepfakes, and analyse their impact on women's safety and dignity in digital spaces.
7. Analyse structural inequalities within media industries, including the glass ceiling, technical exclusion, pay inequality, and gender-based division of journalistic work.
8. Examine the exclusion of women journalists from decision-making roles and "hard news" beats such as politics, crime, defence, and the economy.
9. Evaluate the contributions of award-winning women journalists, editors, filmmakers, producers, and social media influencers in challenging gender norms and expanding women's representation in media.
10. Develop an understanding of legal and regulatory frameworks related to women and media, including the Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986, Cinematograph Act, 1952, Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, and the Cable Television Networks (Regulation) Act, 1995.
11. Understand contemporary digital governance mechanisms, including OTT self-regulation and IT Amendment Rules related to online content and digital safety.

12. Apply gender-sensitive and critical media perspectives to analyse representation, digital culture, media ethics, and women's rights in contemporary society.

PAPER: DSC- WS-302- Women and Development

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to examine the relationship between gender and development by understanding gender equality as both a cause and outcome of development processes. It seeks to critically analyze historical and contemporary development strategies through a feminist perspective and assess the impact of globalization on women's labour, autonomy, and socio-cultural conditions. The course also aims to evaluate the changing approaches of Indian development policies from welfare to empowerment and women-led development through plans, programmes, and development indicators.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the concept of development and differentiate between growth and development using indicators such as HDI, GDI, and GEM.
2. Analyse gender as a central issue in development and examine the relationship between gender equality and sustainable development.
3. Develop an understanding of major development paradigms and strategies, including trickle-down theory, basic needs approach, structural adjustment programmes, human-centric development, and sustainable human development.
4. Critically examine frameworks such as Women in Development (WID), Women and Development (WAD), and Gender and Development (GAD) in understanding women's roles in development processes.
5. Evaluate the impact of globalization on women in sectors such as agriculture, health, education, formal and informal economies, and the gig economy.
6. Understand gender analysis tools and frameworks, including the Harvard Analytical Framework and the Moser Framework, in planning and policy analysis.
7. Examine the concepts of gender mainstreaming and Gender Responsive Budgeting (GRB) in development planning and governance.
8. Analyse the role, rationale, and effectiveness of microfinance and alternative financial arrangements in women's economic empowerment.
9. Trace the changing approaches to women's development in India's Five-Year Plans, from welfare to development and empowerment perspectives.
10. Assess the role of NITI Aayog and the SDG India Index in monitoring gender and development indicators.
11. Understand the role of national institutions and policy mechanisms for the advancement of women in India.
12. Critically evaluate the contemporary policy paradigm of women-led development and its significance for inclusive and sustainable growth.

PAPER: DSC- WS-303: Women and Human Rights

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to develop an understanding of women's human rights from constitutional, international, and feminist perspectives. It seeks to familiarize students with major legal frameworks, institutional mechanisms, and contemporary issues affecting women, while promoting a rights-based and gender-sensitive approach towards equality, justice, and women's empowerment.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the concept, evolution, and different generations of human rights with special reference to women's human rights.
2. Develop knowledge of international human rights provisions and feminist critiques of the human rights framework.
3. Examine constitutional provisions in India related to women's rights, including Fundamental Rights, Directive Principles, and Fundamental Duties.
4. Understand the role and functioning of institutions such as the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC), National Commission for Women (NCW), and National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR) in protecting women's rights.
5. Analyse the role of judicial activism in advancing women's human rights with reference to issues such as workplace harassment, maintenance, guardianship, and the Indian Young Lawyers Association v. State of Kerala.
6. Critically examine violence against women as a human rights violation in both private and public spheres.
7. Understand the impact of conflict, caste and communal violence, displacement, migration, and poverty on women's human rights.
8. Analyse contemporary issues affecting women's human rights, including reproductive rights, cybercrime, access to safe drinking water and sanitation, illiteracy, and unemployment.
9. Develop a gender-sensitive and rights-based perspective towards equality, dignity, justice, and women's empowerment.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PAPER SETTERS AND THE CANDIDATES

(i) There will be 80 marks for the theory paper and 20 marks for internal assessment.

(ii) For improvement and reappear candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in the theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

There shall be 9 questions in all, out of which the candidate shall attempt 5 questions. First question shall be Short Answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words. The candidate is required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions of 2 marks each. It shall carry 20 marks and shall be compulsory. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each Unit shall havetwo questions and the candidate shall attempt one question from each Unit- 4 in all.

DISCIPLINE SPECIFIC ELECTIVE: Student can opt for any one of the following Papers:

PAPER: DSC- WS-304- Opt (i): Women and Management

PAPER: DSC- WS-304- Opt (ii): Women and STEM

PAPER: DSC- WS-304- Opt (i): Women and Management

Time: 3 Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims to develop an understanding of management processes through a gender-sensitive perspective. It seeks to familiarise students with organisational structures, leadership, and barriers such as tokenism and the glass ceiling, while providing basic knowledge of project, human resource, and financial management. The course also aims to critically examine the role of women in leadership and the challenges faced by them in organisational settings.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes: After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the concept, principles, and managerial processes of planning, coordinating, and controlling from a gender-sensitive perspective.
2. Critically analyse major approaches to management, including Equity Theory, Complementarity Approach, the Ideal Manager Construct, and organisational structure theories through a gender lens.
3. Develop an understanding of the status and participation of women in management at the global level.
4. Examine the social, cultural, and organisational factors influencing the emergence of women as managers.
5. Analyse barriers faced by women managers, including the glass ceiling, sticky floors, glass cliff, occupational segregation, gender stereotypes, and role conflict.
6. Understand the basics of project design and management, including goal setting, activity planning, monitoring, and evaluation.
7. Develop knowledge of Human Resource Management and examine the role and participation of women in organisational management.
8. Assess the importance of financial management skills for women and analyse the challenges and gender gaps related to financial decision-making and access.
9. Understand the concept of leadership and evaluate women's leadership styles, skills, and approaches.
10. Critically examine the challenges faced by women leaders in political, social, and organisational contexts.
11. Apply gender-sensitive managerial and leadership perspectives in organisational practices, decision-making, and project management.

Each Unit shall havetwo questions and the candidate shall attempt one question from each Unit- 4 in all.

Unit I: Concept and Approaches to Management:

- Concept and Principles of Management
- The Managerial Process: Planning, Coordinating, and Controlling
- Critical Analysis of Approaches to Management from gender lens:
    - The Equity Theory (John Stacey Adams)
    - The Complementarity Approach (Mary Parker Follett)
    - The Ideal Manager Construct
    - Organisation Structure Approach

Unit II: Women as Managers:

- Global Overview of Women in Management
- Factors impacting emergence of women as managers.
- Barriers for Women Managers:
    - Glass Ceiling, Sticky Floors, Glass Cliff
    - Gender stereotypes
    - Occupational Segregation
    - Role Conflict

Unit III: Managerial Skills

- Project Design and Management:
    - Defining goals, activities, and indicators for a project.
    - Monitoring & Evaluation (M&E)
- Human Resource & Financial Basics:
    - Overview of Human Resource Management and Role of Women
    - Women and Financial Management Skills: Gender gaps, Importance and Challenges

PAPER: DSC- WS-304- Option(ii): Women and STEM

Time: 3Hours

Marks: 100

Objectives: This course investigates the ways in which issues regarding science, technology, engineering and mathematics intersect with gender. It aims to trace the historical exclusion and contribution of women in scientific and mathematical disciplines as well as to understand the historical and contemporary interrelationships among women, gender, science, and technology. It further seeks to evaluate the empowerment potential and digital threats of ICTs, including AI ethics and the gendered digital divide.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes: After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the historical construction of science and technology as male-dominated fields and examine women's participation in STEM disciplines.
2. Critically analyse feminist perspectives on science, including critiques of scientific objectivity and the concept of situated knowledge proposed by thinkers such as Sandra Harding and Donna Haraway.
3. Develop an understanding of the STEM pipeline and the "leaky pipeline" theory in relation to women's careers in science and technology.
4. Examine women's representation in fields such as physics, mathematics, engineering, life sciences, and medicine through contemporary and historical case studies.
5. Analyse the causes of the gender gap in STEM, including institutional barriers, gender hierarchies, the Matilda Effect, psychological factors, workplace climate, and work-life balance issues.
6. Evaluate the social, economic, and scientific impact of women's underrepresentation in STEM fields and assess strategies for increasing women's participation.
7. Understand technology as a gendered and masculine culture and critically examine the historical exclusion of women from technological development.
8. Analyse the gendered dimensions of household technologies and their impact on women's roles, labour, and everyday life.
9. Develop an understanding of New Reproductive Technologies (NRTs), including IVF, surrogacy, and genetic engineering, and their implications for women.
10. Examine the impact of technological change and digital transformation on women's lives and opportunities.
11. Understand the concept of the gender digital divide and analyse factors such as access, literacy, affordability, and digital inclusion.
12. Evaluate the empowering role of ICTs in education, financial inclusion, communication, and social activism for women.
13. Critically examine emerging digital threats and Technology-Facilitated Gender-Based Violence (TFGBV), including trolling, cyberstalking, and deepfakes.

14. Apply gender-sensitive perspectives to science, technology, digital culture, and innovation for promoting inclusive and equitable development.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PAPER SETTERS AND THE CANDIDATES

(i) There will be 80 marks for the theory paper and 20 marks for internal assessment.

(ii) For improvement and reappear candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in the theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

The paper setter must put note (ii) in the question paper.

There shall be 9 questions in all, out of which the candidate shall attempt 5 questions. First question shall be Short Answer type containing 15 short questions spread over the whole syllabus to be answered in about 25 to 30 words. Each Unit shall havetwo questions and the candidate shall attempt one question from each Unit- 4 in all.

Unit I: Foundations and Feminist Critiques of Science

- The construction of science as a male pursuit
- Historical Overview of Women in STEM
- Feminist Perspectives on Science: Critiques of scientific objectivity (Sandra Harding); the concept of Situated Knowledge (Donna Haraway)
- The STEM Pipeline: The Leaky Pipeline theory
- Women's Career in STEM: An Overview

Unit II: The STEM Gender Gap (in the 20th and 21st centuries)

- Representation of Women in Physics, Mathematics, Engineering, Life Sciences and Medicine.
- Case studies of successful women's representation in STEM
- Reasons for Gender Gap:
    - Lack of opportunities
    - Gendered Hierarchies in Scientific Institutions
    - Matilda Effect
    - Psychological factors
    - The Chilly Climate in labs
    - Lack of work-life balance
- The Impact of the Gender Gap
- Strategies for Increasing women's representation in STEM

Unit III: Women and Technology

- Technology as Masculine Culture: historical exclusion of women from technological development

- Household Technologies: Historical overview, Gendered Dimensions of Household Technologies, Inadequate technologies for household basic needs, impact of household technology upon gender roles.
- New Reproductive Technologies (NRTs): IVF, Surrogacy, and Genetic Engineering
- Impact of Technological Change upon Women

Unit IV: ICTs, AI, and the Gender Digital Divide

- The Gendered Digital Divide: Definition, causes (access, literacy, and cost), and impact
- Empowerment via ICT: e-learning, Digital financial inclusion (UPI/Mobile Banking), and social media activism.
- Emerging Digital Threats: Technology-Facilitated Gender-Based Violence
    - Trolling
    - Cyber-stalking
    - Deepfakes

RESEARCH BASED COURSE (RBC) - This course is compulsory

PAPER: DSC- WS-305: Basics of Social Research

Time: 3Hours
Marks: 100

Objectives: This course aims at providing the students with a firm grounding in research methodology through a comprehensive understanding of the concepts as well as the tools and techniques employed in research in social sciences in general, and women's studies in particular. The students shall also be familiarized with the basic statistical concepts used in social research. Specifically it seeks to

- To provide a foundational understanding of the Scientific Method and its application in Social Sciences.
- To master the Quantitative Research Process, from hypothesis testing to sampling.
- To develop proficiency in Basic Statistics and data processing tools essential for evidence-based policy research.

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes:

After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the meaning, scope, and significance of social research and the application of the scientific method in social sciences.
2. Differentiate between concepts, constructs, facts, theories, and hypotheses, and apply inductive and deductive reasoning in research.
3. Develop awareness regarding research ethics, including informed consent, anonymity, confidentiality, and prevention of plagiarism.
4. Identify research problems, formulate research questions, and conduct literature reviews using appropriate academic sources.
5. Understand different sources of data and apply various tools of data collection such as surveys, questionnaires, interviews, and observation.
6. Examine different types of research designs and sampling methods used in social science research.
7. Develop an understanding of variables, levels of measurement, and representative sampling in quantitative research.
8. Acquire basic skills in data processing, coding, tabulation, and statistical analysis using Excel/SPSS.
9. Apply measures of central tendency and dispersion for the interpretation and analysis of quantitative data.
10. Develop skills in report writing, interpretation of findings, and academic citation using APA and MLA styles.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PAPER SETTERS AND THE CANDIDATES

(i) There will be 80 marks for the theory paper and 20 marks for internal assessment.

(ii) For improvement and reappear candidates, who have not been assessed earlier for internal assessment, the marks secured by them in the theory paper will proportionately be increased to maximum marks of the paper in lieu of internal assessment.

The candidate is required to attempt any 10 short answer type questions of 2 marks each. It shall carry 20 marks and shall be compulsory. Rest of the paper shall contain 4 units. Each Unit shall havetwo questions and the candidate shall attempt one question from each Unit- 4 in all.

Unit I: Foundations of Social Research

- Meaning of Research, Pure vs. Applied Research; the significance of social research
- The Scientific Method: Definition, Objectives, Application to Social Sciences, Issues of Subjectivity- Objectivity
- Conceptual Foundations:
    - Difference between Concepts and Constructs; Fact and Theory
    - Hypothesis: Features, Types, Induction and Deduction.
- Ethics and Integrity in Research: Informed consent, anonymity, and preventing plagiarism.

Unit II: The Research Process

- Steps in Research
- Formulating the Research Problem and defining research questions.
- Techniques for Literature review
- Data Sources: Primary and. Secondary data
- Tools of Data Collection:
    - Surveys & Questionnaires
    - Interviews: Structured and semi-structured formats.
    - Observation: Controlled and Uncontrolled.

Unit III: Research Design and Sampling

- Research Design
    - Definition
    - Typology: Exploratory, Descriptive, Diagnostic, and Experimental Design
    - Issues in Research Design
- Sampling:
    - Probability Sampling: Simple Random, Systematic, Stratified, Cluster sampling, Multi-Stage Sampling.
    - Non-Probability Sampling: Purposive, Quota, and Snowball Sampling.
- Representative sample and Sampling Error

Unit IV: Quantitative Data Processing, Statistics and Report Writing:

- Variables-Discrete and Continuous; Independent and Dependent
- Levels of Measurement: Nominal, Ordinal, Interval, and Ratio scales.
- Data Processing: Editing, Coding (using Excel/SPSS basics)
- Descriptive Statistics:
    - Measures of Central Tendency: Mean, Median, Mode
    - Measures of Dispersion: Range, Variance, and Standard Deviation.
- Tabulation, Cross-tabulation and Graphic Representation of Data.

- Interpretation and Analysis of Data
- Technical Writing: Structure of a Quantitative Research Report; Citations (APA/MLA styles).

RESEARCH BASED COURSE (RBC)

PAPER: DSC- WS-405: Emerging Trends in Feminist Research Methodology

Time: 3 Hours

Marks: 100

Objective: This course introduces the students to the emerging methodologies in social science research, particularly the feminist research and qualitative research. It also exposes the students to the mixed techniques of quantitative and qualitative methods in social research. The specific focus of the course is to train the students in feminist research methodology and its tools and techniques through: Critiquing traditional methodologies through Feminist Standpoint Theory, understanding Qualitative Techniques that capture lived experiences especially of marginalised women, Introducing students to Mixed-Methods Research and Digital Methodologies (Big Data/Social Media analysis).

Pedagogy of the Course Work: Lectures, assignments, presentations, documentaries and other media

Course Outcomes: After the completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the meaning, scope, and significance of feminist epistemology and feminist research methodology.
2. Differentiate between traditional social science research and feminist research approaches.
3. Develop an understanding of feminist standpoint theory and major issues, challenges, and limitations in feminist research.
4. Distinguish between quantitative and qualitative research approaches and evaluate their relevance in women's studies research.
5. Understand the features, merits, and limitations of qualitative research methods such as ethnography, oral history, focus group discussions, case studies, and participatory action research.
6. Examine the use of mixed methods research, triangulation, meta-analysis, and content analysis in social science and feminist research.
7. Develop skills in qualitative data analysis, including coding, thematic analysis, and interpretation of patterns and themes.
8. Understand basic concepts of correlation and statistical significance in research analysis.
9. Acquire knowledge of qualitative research report writing, including structure, format, and ethical precautions.
10. Develop skills for disseminating research through academic journals, policy briefs, community-based materials, and open-access platforms.
11. Apply feminist and ethical perspectives in conducting, analysing, and presenting social science research.
